I CALL IT HOW I SEE IT, STARK.
YOU'RE STILL BLAMING THE AVENGERS FOR CREATING ULTRON.
THEY DID.
SO YOU BLAME ME.
YOU DO HAVE TO TAKE SOME RESPONSIBILITY FOR IT, TONY.
YUP.
BANNER, YOU AND I HAVE LIVED A LONG TIME.
BOTH OF US HAVE A LOT OF THINGS WE HAVE TO TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR.
A LITTLE LATE TO START POINTING FINGERS.
MOMMY AND DADDY ARE FIGHTING.
SO, UM, WHAT HAPPENS NOW?
I'LL TELL YOU EXACTLY WHAT HAPPENS NOW...
THE AVENGERS, YOUR PARENTS, WILL COME HERE IN A FEW DAYS AND SEE WHAT THE WORLD HAS BECOME.
THEY WILL MEET YOU AND THEN THEY WILL GO A FEW DAYS INTO THE PAST, MAYBE EVEN TO TODAY, AND THEY WILL ASK ULTRON TO HELP THEM STOP ME FROM RUINING THE TIMESTREAM.
THIS IS MAKING ME DIZZY.
HOW WILL WE KNOW IF IT WORKED?

TOMORROW.
MY YOUNGER SELF WILL LAUNCH THE FIRST STRIKE ON ULTRON.
WHY CAN'T YOU STOP YOURSELF FROM DOING IT?
I TOLD YOU...I TRIED.
YOU SHOULD'VE TRIED HARDER.
MY YOUNGER SELF...IS OUT OF CONTROL--
TELL ME BANNER, CAN YOU RELATE?
IT TOOK ME A LONG TIME TO REALIZE, A LONG TIME, THAT I'M NOT A WELL MAN.
GUYS, LEAVE THE OLD TIME-TRAVELING TERRORIST ALONE.
LITTLE AVENGERS, GO DO SOME RECON.
SEE IF YOU SEE ANYTHING.
STAY OUT OF SIGHT.
SHOULD I GO WITH THEM?
YOU STAY WITH ME, HONEY.

Bill Foster: I was a research scientist working at a Stark Industries research and development plant. I wasn't thrilled about leaving my work, but when the boss calls and says, "Go do this," you go do it. Frankly, I wasn't making a lot of headway in my own work, and when he called, I thought I was either getting fired or being read the riot act, so…

Dr. Henry Pym: Bill and I clicked immediately. He was an immense help and we were able to figure out what I had done wrong and fix it. He was an extra set of eyes. He came in with a fresh perspective. Even though testing the fix on myself was even scarier than the situation I was in, there was really no way, at this point, to humanely test it on anything or anybody else. I had to, again, use myself as a guinea pig. But I wasn't ready.

Bill Foster: He was distracting himself with Avengers business. He was doing anything to not think about what the next step would be in the procedure or how much trouble he was actually in. His mood shifts and personality swings were getting more and more severe.

Janet Van Dyne: He was mean. He was picking fights with everybody. I know everyone likes to focus on the fights he picked with me. But he was doing it with everybody.

Clint Barton: It was like he was on steroids. Who knows what those Pym particles did to his brain?

Steve Rogers: Again, I didn't know him before he became Giant-Man so it was hard to judge what kind of changes he was going through. He was a founding Avenger. It was his team. We were his guests. And he was excellent in the field. Fearless. Selfless. Smart. But yes, breaking up fights that he started in the halls of Avengers Mansion was becoming my daily workout.

Janet Van Dyne: Even though I knew he wasn't acting like himself, it was very interesting to see what would set him off. Like a drunk, I think that the things he was getting upset about were things that were actually upsetting him. I remember him being very upset about Natasha Romanoff. That was interesting.

Clint Barton: I had rekindled my relationship with the Black Widow, which I knew was not the best idea in the world for numerous reasons, but, hey, what can I tell you?

The Black Widow is a rather mysterious figure. Reportedly she was a Soviet spy who had numerous run-ins with Iron Man before defecting to the United States. She was recruited by numerous teams and eventually became an Avenger and reportedly a high-ranking agent of S.H.I.E.L.D. The Black Widow refused repeated invitations to be part of this project.
